

transport

The rose, for all its behavior, is smaller than the lifelove it stands for,
only briefly brightening,
and even its odor
only a metaphor.
Or so we suppose
just as we suppose the savior we employ or see next door is only some hired man gardening.

—Marie Ponsot