

Composing Narratives

Use your own imagination to write a mystery story. Start with some of the words you have read, written, and learned in this book. There are some pictures on these pages to remind you of the words you have learned.

Be sure to give your mystery a TITLE. A title tells what the story is about in just a few words.

The Case of the _____

by _____

(your name goes here!)

One day, _____ and _____ were (make up a name) (name)

walking near a big _____.

They saw a _____ and a _____. They heard a _____

_____ and a _____.

They smelled a _____ and a _____.

They were pretty happy. Then, all at once, they saw _____

_____. Then they heard _____.

"What is that thing?!" asked _____.

"I don't know," answered _____.

"But let's go see!" They walked toward a _____ _____ and stopped.

Then _____

_____. When that happened, they _____

_____. They felt _____

_____.

They thought _____.

Later on, they talked about what to do next. "Let's

_____, " they decided.

So they _____.

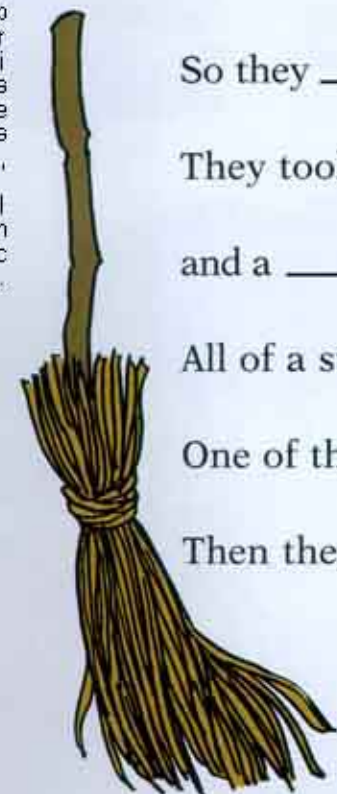

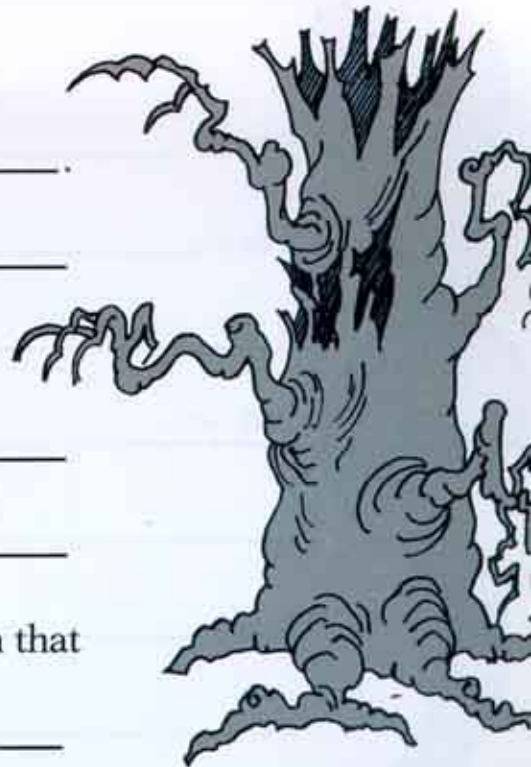

They took along a _____

and a _____.

All of a sudden, _____.

One of them yelled, " _____!"

Then they _____.

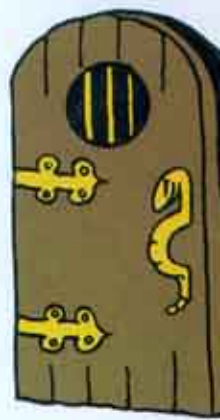

It was _____.

They _____

So "The Case of the _____" was finally solved. The mystery turned out to be _____.

Now _____ and _____ feel like real detectives.

The End

