I grew up imagining that authors lead glamorous lives full of excitement and adventure. You know … traveling to exotic places, and meeting all sorts of famous people! Now that I am a writer, I know the real scoop.”

Jennifer L. Holm is the author of several historical fiction novels for middle-grade readers, including Penny From Heaven, a 2007 Newbery Honor Book. When I was a kid, I liked to read. A lot. One of our neighbors said recently that his clearest memory of me as a child was watching me rake the lawn one-handed while I read a book with the other! In fact, the highlight of a particular summer vacation was not, for me, going on the water slide at an amusement park, but rather stopping at a bookstore with a great kid’s section and discovering—gasp!—that my favorite author had written four more books.

I was born in California across from a zoo and then we lived on Whidbey Island in the Puget Sound, and then moved again to Audubon, Pennsylvania, where I spent most of my childhood. My dad was a pediatrician, and my mom a pediatric nurse. We had a dog named Ruffy who had a bad habit of chasing skunks and a hamster named Sneaker who liked to curl up in my hair and fall asleep (he was a very mellow hamster). My childhood has always been my main source of inspiration for my writing. Another big influence during these years were comic books and cartoon strips. My brothers and I would fight over the big color funny section of the Sunday newspaper. I still love comic books and graphic novels and I think reading them has helped make me a better writer.

I really started writing as a student at Dickinson College. After I graduated, I moved to New York City where I became a broadcast producer of television commercials and music videos. I enjoyed working in television, but I had always wanted to be a writer. . . .

I’m trying to stay out of trouble these days. I still prefer reading to amusement parks, and on occasion, I rake the lawn while reading a book. Although I confess I don’t seem to get many leaves up that way. I now split my time between writing and taking care of my son, Will. Will, my husband, Jonathan Hamel, and I live in northeastern United States with one slightly stinky cat named Princess Leia Organa.”
