

What really connects words and things?

Not much, decided my husband, and proceeded to use language in the way that Homer says the gods do.
All human words are known to the gods
but have for them entirely other meanings alongside our meanings.
They flip the switch at will.

—Anne Carson

from Tango VII.
THE BEAUTY OF THE HUSBAND (c) 2001 by Anne Carson published by Alfred A. Knopf background image: Detail of a letter written by John Keats. Reproduced by permission of the British Library, London. Add MS 34019, f.1